

Well I blogged here for a couple of days, then great weather drew me back outside. Last night I was corresponding with clients and working on a couple of website fixes, so I didn't post a new blog. Today I see that I am back in number 15 position for the search phrase "best web designer in Canada"

". I am assuming that this is because of my blogging efforts after the weekend, as opposed to my lack of blog yesterday.

I need another strategy to implement, that will draw more interest in my website. I was reading a blog about this very project on HubPages and picked up a few pointers, which I will implement after I start a blog on there as well.

I think that more consistent effort, as well as more research can get me listed as number one as the "best web designer in Canada".